DNOW is a leading global stocking supplier of energy and industrial solutions, products, and engineered equipment packages. We provide an extensive selection of pipe, valves, and fittings, in addition to supplies, and products to the energy and industrial markets worldwide. We have a network of locations spanning over 20 countries, and our online digital channels give customers easy access to the products they need when they need them. Pursuant to the Modern Slavery Act, organisations which supply goods and services, carry on a business or part of a business in the United Kingdom, and have a total global annual turnover of at least £36 million are required to publish a slavery and human trafficking statement for each financial year. DNOW recognizes the significance of eliminating Modern Slavery and understands that Modern Slavery can take many forms, including but not limited to, child or forced labour and human trafficking.

DNOW recognizes the responsibility to respect the human rights of its employees and individuals and is committed to taking a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery within our operations, supply chain, and the communities where we do business. This includes taking the necessary actions to comply with the requirements set forth in the Modern Slavery Act. DNOW continues to monitor and enforce these obligations through our DNOW Code of Business Conduct and Ethical Standards, which prohibits the use of any form of child or forced labor, slavery, or human trafficking. DNOW also continues to work with its employees, suppliers, and representatives to ensure that our operations are free from those practices, and that we promote the health and safety of our workers everywhere. In addition, we ensure compliance with fair wage and hour laws in all operations. At DNOW, we will not knowingly conduct business with any supplier or other business partner who violates these standards.

Our commitment to human rights and preventing modern slavery includes encouraging our stakeholders to report any suspected violations or concerns.
